About the protecting of our night sky, I believe the City should keep lighting for main street and neighborhood street lamps at 3,000K. The Audobon Society, American Medical Association, and other groups have suggestions that lighting above 4,000K is detrimental to animals and humans. Santa Fe has prided itself on being a town that wants to preserve his history. We should want to preserve the view of our stars as Tucson and Flagstaff are doing. We don't need garish bright blue-green lights on our streets.
